Frontier League

2023

The ThunderBolts have been proud members of the Frontier League since 1999. Only one other current franchise has been in the league as long as the Bolts.

The goal of the league was to bring professional baseball to places that affiliated baseball wouldn't go. Ironically, the league is now a part of Major League Baseball as an official Partner League. What started in 1993 as eight teams playing in municipal parks has become an international circuit featuring 16 teams in seven states and two Canadian provinces. The Frontier League is North America's oldest continually operating Partner League of Major League Baseball.

Each year, millions of fans watch Frontier League baseball in some of the best ballparks in the country. Millions more have watched on our league wide streaming platform. Thousands of players have had their contracts purchased by Major League clubs and the Frontier League has had more players signed to contracts with MLB organizations than any other Partner League in the country.

Baseball's best from around the country and abroad play for the Windy City ThunderBolts and the Frontier League. The club has won three league championships since moving to the Chicago Southland and are proud of our action-packed style of baseball.

The road to "The Show" goes through Crestwood. Since entering the region as the Cook County Cheetahs a quarter of a century ago, our organization has been a platform for players that dream to move on to Major League Baseball organizations. No other Partner League organization has moved more players to MLB systems, and the ThunderBolts have produced many big leaguers from their alumni including former Chicago Cubs and White Sox.
